

M E T A M O R P H O S I S

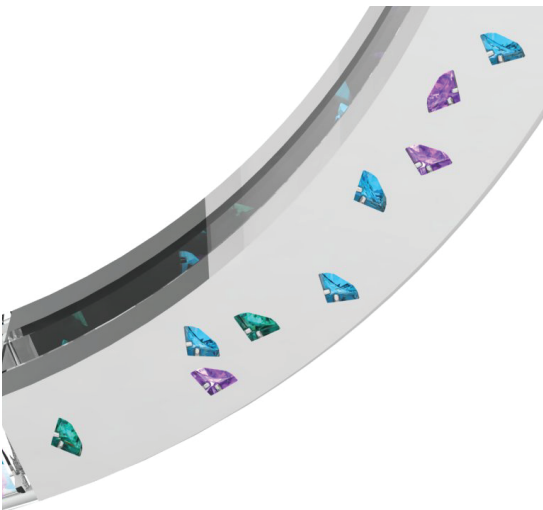

the gemstones are shining through the path of the meaning this artwork tries to show the story of love. i believe this story is all about evolving the process of communication due to touch the fittest way to feel each other.

the story began from the lowest part of the artwork, where two hollow glass sections are stuck. there was two glassy cuboids filled by some colors and accidentally they have met each other. these two cuboids wanted to see each other without any barrier.

at the begining it seemed to be that it is impossible, no doors, no holes, or any other way, actually they have trapped in theirselves. so they decided to evolve to transfer themselves. they have gone on their own ways, but their goal was the same, seeing each other without any barrier. this passion led them to create a wonderful way to reach their goal. in the early stages, their ways was not so clear, they just grew chaotically. but gradually the path became a real pattern.

they grew and through this evolution they have made their own characters. eventually they reach the top of the path. right in this place magic had happened. through this metamorphosis they reach a new exclusivity. now their colors are changing under different lights. when they see each other in new forms without any barrier, they mezmized and freeze at there forever, like they can not look anywhere else but each other.

the climax happen when the light pass through the gemstones, it reflects from one stone to another one. this communication that made by light make the ex-cuboids connected more than ever, and this is the magic of love.